

We invite you to a Quoll Discovery Day

Have you seen a spotted-tailed quoll?

Did you know that only 1 in 10 Australians know what a quoll is – yet this is the largest marsupial carnivore on the Australian mainland? Quolls are threatened across much of their range and need our help!

Join us at the
Numinbah Valley Hall, Nerang – Murwillumbah Road
Numinbah Valley, Gold Coast Hinterland

Sunday 26 July 10am – 12.30pm

Leading quoll researcher Dr Scott Burnett will give presentations and answer questions about quolls, where they can be found, threats to their survival and what can be done by landowners and the public to prevent these animals from becoming another extinction statistic.

One lucky local landowner will receive a grant of $750 to quoll-proof their poultry pen.

Come and meet a live spotted-tailed quoll courtesy of Martin Fingland from Geckoes Wildlife Presentations.

RSVP: quoll@wildlife.org.au or phone Ewa at Wildlife Queensland on 3221 0194 for more details.
